

THE SISTER REPUBLIC

Border Troubles with the United States and Gu-temala - Condition of the Country - Gladstone's Speech at Leeds - Big Fire at Liverpool - General Foreign News.

NEW YORK, October 7. - A special dispatch to the National Associated Press says: President Gonzales convened the Mexican Congress on the 6th inst. His message was considered a very able effort.

It began in the following language: Since the adjournment of the last session of Congress peace has reigned, and progress has been the watchword of the day. With respect to our inter-national relations there exist two causes of grave moment to our Government. The one is the state of insecurity along our northern border, consequent upon the ravages of the Indians from the neighboring republic and the frequent incursions of cattle thieves. The other is the question of boundary line between the republics of Guatemala and Mexico. The complaints and demands of our minister at Washington in regard to the former have generally received replies and everything tends to the belief that but for the deplorable misfortune which has befallen the people of the United

which has stricken the people of the United States in the assassination of their beloved President, the Government of that country would have paid more attention to our repeated representations, and remedied the evils of which we are, with so much justice, complaining. Our relations with Guatemala on the south, unfortunately, do not have the favorable outlook of our border troubles on the north. Our Government has shown a ready disposition to settle the vexed question of boundary between the two countries. We have been met by pro-

two countries. We have been met by procrastination and a general indifference on the part of Guatemala to this most serious of questions. The vagueness and uncertainty surrounding the settlement of this below: "In condition of our country is consoling in the highest degree. Peace is confirmed; interior and foreign commerce is increasing. There are more than 17,000 kilometres of telegraph in operation. The cable places us in connection with the whole civilized world. Iron rails pierce and surmount the mountains and traverse the valleys. Our revenues reach a figure without precedent; property is increasing in value, interest on money is diminishing, and more than 80,000 heads of families and more than 80,000 hands, formerly inactive or turned to unremunerative tasks, now find employment and contribute their labor to the welfare and general prosperity of our country.

LAND LEAGUE AFFAIRS.
America as an Example of Contentment.
Parnell's Future Plans.
 DUBLIN, October 7.—Professor Goldwin

Smith, in a very lengthy address to the Social Science Congress to-day, pointed out the example of America relative to the settlement of the land question. There was, he said, very little socialism there, for the property had a guard, consisting of the free-hold farmers and liberty, with the love of which the people were thoroughly imbued, was opposed as much as property to communism. In no community was wealth farmers of large portion, says he has arrived at the general conclusion that on the western side the Shannon farmers are disposed to take advantage of the land act to the utmost possible extent, and no red herring trailed across their path by the Land League will divert them from this purpose. By special invitation Parnell and the executive of the Land League Labor Convention will assemble in Dublin at the end of October for the purpose of forming a national organization of free laborers.

A national organization of farm laborers, to act with and under the direction of the League. A separate labor executive will be formed which will direct and control the organization. Delegates from England will attend. A few of the prominent leaders of the Labor movement will be selected at the Convention as candidates for Parliament.

Gladstone at Leeds.
LONDON, October 7.—Gladstone, in his speech to-day at Leeds, explained the foreign principles to exist of two main principles; that every foreign country should be credited with the same good motives as ourselves until it showed the contrary. For elves until it showed the contrary, and every power was entitled to the same rights and privileges, irrespective of size. He concluded by saying it was not for him, whose life was drawing to its inevitable close, to anticipate the long future desired

Referring to the free trade league he said that some persons complained about American tariff. American want us $3,000.

The fair traders wanted the Americans to cease to be our customers to this amount.

At the banquet given to Mr. Gladstone to-night there were 1,400 persons present. Mr. Gladstone said: "Justice to Ireland is a sacred duty, but it can never be performed with equal justice to the other parts of the United Kingdom."

never be performed with equal justice to England and Scotland. The state of Ireland might not be a party question. Ireland is in a great crisis, and on the working of the land act may depend the greatest issues with regard to her prosperity. There are powerful agencies working, which will yet influence her fate in spite of the action of certain persons. The Times says: The speeches of Gladstone, in the present condition of affairs, can hardly be felt to be taken as a forecast.

arely fail to be taken as an important political manifesto. The country will listen with anxious interest to Gladstone's judgments on the questions now demanding the attention of the government, and will feel that the occasion is one for party controversy more than for rank exposition of Gladstone's views on urgent matters of home and foreign affairs.
